Stephen Mossop, United Kingdom, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Four different stories - four very different Christmases. Frost At Midnight Jake s love for his new wife and son is offset only by the fact that he s just lost his job at the Christmas Tree farm (but then, who buys Christmas trees after Christmas Eve?), and the fact that they re going to have to find a new place to live - again - because their landlord won t have babies in his properties. Despair weighs heavy on his shoulders. After his last, long shift at the farm he s cold and he s tired, but on Christmas Eve night, Jake takes on the midnight feed from his exhausted wife. He talks to his son about his past, his hopes and his dreams.but can an overlooked Christmas card offer hope for a better future? Perfect Christmas Angels Amanda really isn t in the mood for Christmas. Her daughter barks at her all the time, and her new boss is so obviously trying to get rid of her - but if it wasn t for the weird nuisance phone calls, she could just about cope. It s always the same thing.hundreds of times a day. Come Home Jenny, please, please, please come home. She doesn t know any Jenny , and she certainly doesn t know the caller. How can she make them stop? With help from her new ex-policewoman friend Eileen, she tracks down the source of the calls and on Christmas Eve they go to confront the perpetrator. For Eileen, what they find offers closure on a 30-year-old unsolved case she was involved in as a rookie cop. For Amanda, it means so much more. It offers a...
